To the Editor of $\phi$ Intelligencer.

SIR:—In yesterday morning's edition of your paper I find that Mr T. M. Garvin is having trouble in settling in his own mind the exact location of old Fort Henry. The following occurrence might possibly help Mr. Garvin in his quandary. While foreman during the laying of the Wheeling Natural Gas Company's lines through the city, at a point on Main street extending from a few feet below the suspension bridge down to the building now occupied tons and many trinkets such as bridged tons and many trinkets such as bridged tons and many trinkets such as location of two musket. Quite an excitement was made over the find and crowds gathered to such an extent as 10 interfere with the work. The ditch was only six feet in depth. All the bones were gathered and placed in the ditch just in front of No. 1011 Main street. I suppose some seven or eight skeletons were found in the distance named. I remember that many of Wheeling's citizens freely expressed themselves that the find fully settled the question as to the locality of old Fort Ylerry. The line was lived the find spoken of, in June, 1885.

The demand for goods improves, and a great season is confidently expected. The advance in cotton goods does not stop, for the demand is heavy, and standard print cloths have been raised an eighth by the selling committee. But the operatives have demanded higher wages, possibly influenced by reports made when combination was proposed and some works may stop.
